Challenge: Bowling Green State University moved to create a new art school that would re-envision its art program. The goal for the reconstruction of Wolfe Center for the Arts was to create an atmosphere of collaboration where students and faculty can come together to not only create art, but learn about it. The space needed to be inspiring while allowing for collaboration and have the ability to support the technology needed to explore art in any form.

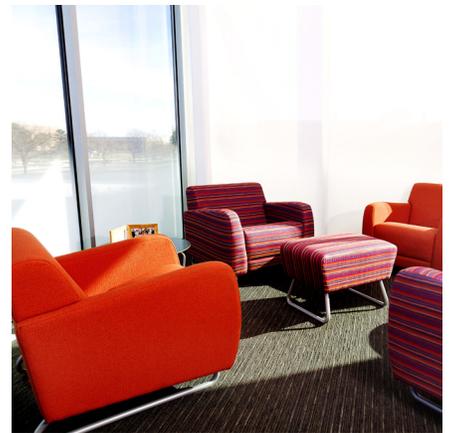

Solution: The Sela® Lounge Collection was essential in the creation of a modern workspace ideal for comfortable and casual collaboration. KI's design team used Unite® workstations to create a flexible space that can accommodate the diverse range of art studies while creating an aesthetically pleasing space.
